

Women Don't Do That

That's what they told Vicki Mathison Vander Vegt when she was growing up – but she proved them wrong.

Vicki Mathison Vander Vegt always thought being a pastor was in her future, but that wasn't the role girls were supposed to play. So she went to college and became a teacher and a wife and a librarian and a mother and a farmer and along the way her dream of becoming a pastor became a reality.

Education opened doors for Pastor Vander Vegt and they can open doors for other young women as well.

Join us for our annual National Business Women's Week Scholarship Fundraiser as we raise money to help dreams come true.
